NEW YORK, THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1888.

NOT BURGLARS, BUT SUICIDE.

PHINNEY KILLED HIMSELF WHILE TEMPO-RARILY INSANE.

The Story of Attack Not So, and He Died With a Lie on His Lips-He Was Once a Conductor on a Boston Railroad-A History of His Antecedents by a Friend.

There remains hardly the shadow of a doubt that Guilford G. Phinney, who was shot at 11 Radde place, Brooklyn, at 2 A. M.

yesterday, died with a lie on his lips. The burglars who he said entered the house and fired the fatal shot were myths.

He killed himself, and all because a mind already diseased had completely given way before the idea that his aspiration for the and of Miss Carrie Carpenter was opposed by her parents.

The only mystery which surrounds the case now is the question, "What disposition case now is the question, "What disposition did he make of his gold watch and other jewelry on that fatal night?"

All else has been discovered by an Evenino Wesld reporter who visited the scene of the sheeting this morning.

DeWitt C. Carpenter, with whom Phinney was boarding, and love for whose daughter Carrie was the cause of young Phinney's vagic end, was at home and invited the reporter into the house, where the innocent cause of the tragedy was found in the front parlor.

cause of the tragedy was found in the front parlor.

She is a rather prepossessing girl of seventeen years, a brunette, of slight and willowy form. Her face bore some trace of the trial she had lately undergone, but she appeared quite cheerful and was certainly very voluble, telling her story without feeling.

She had known Phinney for about seven months, and he had been boarding with her family for about three months—ever since they had hived in the house.

Mr. Phinney was in love with her, but had not asked the consent of her parents to their union.

"I thought it very queer," Mr. Carpenter hera said, "that Phinney never broached the subject of his love for my daughter to me, and I determined that I should know more of him and his antecedents before I gave away my only child to him.

"I made up my mind to this because, though he was argoid-hearted, cheerful fellow, he was erratio. Why, it was only Monday last that he said he was going to Cape Horn."

"Yes, and I persuaded him not to go." but

"Yes, and I persuaded him not to go." put in Miss Carrie.

GUILFORD G. PHINNEY.

"I told my wife." Mr Carpenter proceeded, "of my determinat on regarding the possible marriage of Carrie with Phinney, and I understand the young fellow overheard us talking it over. Nothing was ever said by us talking it over. Nothing was ever said by us about Phinney ever having been married."
Concerning the events of Tuesday night Miss Carpenter said that when she saw Phinney packing his valise she was afraid that he was going away, as he had threatened, and she taxed him with having that intention.

She said that he laughed at the idea and opened the valise for her inspection. It contained nothing but his clothing, which he said he was going to take to the laundry.

He went out, and was gone about half an hour. When he returned he was in a profuse perspiration, and Miss Carpenter asked him why he was so flushed. He replied that he had run to catch the train. hing was ever sai him why he was so flushed. He replied that him why he was so flushed. He replied that he had run to catch the train.

From this fact it is surmised that Phinney had run over to the Saratoga avonue station of the Rapid Transit road and rode down to Flatbush avenue, where he had expressed his valies, containing his watch and other jewelry, to either his brother or sister, and hastened back.

Before retiring that night Phinney had been despondent and told Miss Carpenter that he was sure that something dreaduli was to occur to him before morning.

To day the young lady said that he had frequently had such his of despondency, when he would make her promise that she would let nobody separate them.

Though sne gave the alarm at the time of the shooting. Miss Carpenter said that she did not compose herself sufficiently to go down to see the wounted man until after the ambulance surgeon arrived. She then kissed him at his request and he made her mother promise to "take good care of Carrie."

Pelice Sergt. Velsor, who was on the scene as soon as the ambulance surgeon, said that there was a hole 2% in. in diameter burned in as soon as the ambulance surgeon, said that there was a hele 2½ in. in diameter burned in the young man's night shirt by powder, while Phinney said that the burglar who shot him stood away some distance.

The pistol with which he was shot was only two feet away from his head as he lay on the floor, and was of precisely the same pattern as one found in Ph nney's trunk.

To clinch the suicide theory, Angustus Blazo, a builder who resides on Decatur avenue, near Kingston avenue, tells this story of Phinney's life:

"I have known Phinney for five years. I first became acquainted with him when he was a conductor for the Metropolitan Railway Company in Boston.

"He was a very quiet, gentlemanly fellow, well liked by the officers of the road and the road patrons.

"He was a Free Mason and so was I, and through our society connections we became better acquainted. About four years ago he teld me that he was going to California and soon after went.

"He had not been there long when I retold me that he was going to California and soon after went.

"He had not been there long when I received a letter from there to the effect that he was at the point of death with fever. He recovered after a long siege of illness, and returned to Boston and to his employment on the railroad.

"But he was not the same man that went

West. From a quiet, unobtrusive fellow he had become a flighty, nervous man. His conversation was filled with wild exaggerations, and in a thousand and one ways he showed that his mind had been entirely changed by his illness."
"When I award to be a same man and the same

"When I came to New York to locate three years age he wanted to come with me, and about two years ago, after repeated requests by letter for employment I sent for him and we boarded together with Thomas Layton at Nostrand avenue and Herkimer street.

'Instead of working for me I found that he soon told the people whom he met that he was my partner and circulated wild tales about our business.

was my parrier and circulated wild tales about our business.

'He had saved a few hundred dellars and I invested $500 for him. The next day he spoke of the investment as one of $50,000.

'After this I refused to have any more to do with him in a business way, and he went to work for a milkman downtown."

Mr. Blazo says that Phinney had not more than $1,000. He banked with the Provident Savings Bank, of Boston.

He was an orphan, and leaves a sister living on a little farm owned by him at Avon, Me., and a brother, Stanford Phinney, who resides at Waltham, Mass.

The stories to the effect that Phinney had $50,000 insurance on his life, Mr. Blazo says, are wild rumors. He had about $8,000, and belonged to but seven secret societies—the Masons, A. O. U. W. Royal Arcanum, Red Men, Elks, Select Knights and Order of Tonti.

Richard Mansfield Said to Have Hurried Off Secretly by the City of Rome.

It is said that Richard Mansfield and all his ompany sailed for Liverpool yesterday on the City of Rome in order to reach London and open there in 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde " before Bandmann.

It is known that Bandmann's announcement that he was to appear at the Opera Comique, London, before Mansfield was due there frightened Mansfield a good deal. A member of the company told some friends in the strictest confidence that they were all going in the City of Rome under assumed names and that they were all pledged to Bandmann is at present on his ranch in Montans, and the company were anxious that he should know nothing of their doings. Mansfield stayed at the Croisic, opposite Delmonico's. It was said there this morning that he left on Tuesday night, saying he was going away for a couple of months.

THE GALLANT COLONEL ILL AT EASE IN

He Thinks Landlord Allen Will Find Out His Mistake-The Hetel Man as Strongly Convinced that the Colonel Is Greatly in Error-Threats of a Prosecution for Conspiracy.

Col. Nicholas Smith, son-in-law of the late Horace Greeley, and of recent notoriety as a professional best man, was a conspicuous figure among the prisoners in the Yorkville Police Court this morning.

The Colonel was arrested at the Hotel Hamilton, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, on a warrant sworn out by the proprietor, John Allen, charging him with obtaining board and accommodations by false pretenses. His arrest, published exclusively in this morning's World, caused no little agitation in social circles.

Col. Smith made an effort to appear at his ease in court, but was noticeably nervous. His long, gray, curly hair was dishevelled, his face was unshaven, and his Piccadilly collar, white necktie and linen cuffs were soiled. He wore a light cheviot coat and vest and light striped pantaloons.

While the Colonel was waiting to be ar raigned an Evening Wonld reporter asked him if he had read the published story of his arrest and his dealings with Landlord

He replied in the negative and asked the

He replied in the negative and asked the renorter for a copy of the paper.

His hand trembled perceptibly and his face flushed while reading the story, and when he had concluded he remarked that Mr. Allen was somewhat vindictive.

"I claim that my arrest and confinement ma cell over night is an outrage. Mr. Allen has taken advantage of the law to punish me for s.mething for which I am not responsible, and before he gets through with this matter he'll find out that he has made a mistake."

"Is it true that you have money due you from the sale of property in Virginia?" inquired the reporter.

"Iso stated to Landlord Allen, and it is true that I have an interest in the sale to which I referred."

Then the Colonel added: "I have not been permitted to communicate with my lawyer nor any of my acquaintances, and the law is being used to persecute and humiliate Do you desire to make a statement for publication in relation to this matter?"
"Heball vindicate myself in court, and do

"Ishall vindicate myself in court, and do not care to make any public explanation."

The warrant upon which Col. Smith was arrested was issued under section 382 of the Penal Code, which makes the defrauding of a hotel or inn-keeper a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year and a fine of $1,900, and it was only applied for when Mr. Allen became suspicious that his gentlemanly boarder was preparing to leave the hotel and his unuald bill of $365 behind.

Landlord Allen thinks he has a good cause of action against Lawyer Joseph H. Porter as well as against Col. Smith, and he has retained Lawer John M. Van Cott to prosecute for alleged conspiracy.

When arraigued before Justice Reilly this morning Col. Smith pleaded not guilty and elected to have his case go to the Special Sessions for trial.

He was asked if he could give bail, and he said he presumed he could after seeing his lawyer.

where is your lawyer?" asked the Judge. "At his office, I suppose. I have sent for him to come here," replied the Colonel. "He'll never come." exclaimed Landlord Allen, and the Colonel looked somewhat deected and made no reply.
"We will wait awhile," said Judge Reilly.
"Perhaps the counsel will come."
The Colonel resumed his seat, very ill at

AGENT DRUMMOND'S RESIGNATION.

Reduction of Salary to Make Two Ends Meet the Cause of It-

Col. Alfred L. Drummond, who for many years was the agent of the United States Secret Service for the New York district, and who was recently transferred to Boston, has resigned and will open a private detective bureau in this city.

The cause of Agent Drummond's resigns tion is said to be a cutting down of his salary after his transfer to Boston, which took place on May I last to eke out the appropri-ation for that department to the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. Drummond was first appointed to the New York district of the Secret Service many years ago as an assistant agent. He was afterwards sent to Philadelphia as a full operative, and in 1879 came back to the New York office in that capacity. He re-mained in charge here until last May. He successor is John P. Brooks. Agent Drummond gained a great reputation through his work in counterfeiting cases.

JOSIE SHEPHARD'S CASE COMPLETED. Additional Evidence in Hand Makes an In taken did not throw any new light upon the case, all further legal proceedings looking towards an examination of the books of the institution will be suspended for the present.

The case is now essentially complete, and the evidence which can be placed before the committee at its next meeting relative to the ability of the friends and relatives of the boy to support him and bring him up will no doubt surprise a good many of the members of the Board who have been accustomed to rely entirely upon Mr. Carpenter for their information upon these points.

It is claimed that cases like that of Joseph Shephard are never deeded except upon the fullest investigation of the facts, and that no child is ever apprenticed to a master in the West when it has friends in this part of the country who are able and willing to care for it properly.

country who are able and wining to care for it properly.

The meagreness of the information contained in the transcript from the books of the institution about Jose Shephard shows what sort of evidence the committee had to rely on in deciding that case, the fabrications of Mr. Carpenter's imagination presumably supplying the apparent facts necessary to make out a case against the relatives of the boy when they tried to have him brought back to them.

when they tried to have him brought back to them.

For instance, Mr. Carpenter represented to the committee that the child had been utterly abandoned, when he must have known perfectly well that its grandmother was visiting it all that me and had repeatedly entreated the officers of the institution to permit her to take the child away. Nor did it appear that it was by accident that the child was not reclaimed by its relatives before it was placed in the hands of Mr. Jenkins. of the Society for the Prevention or Cruelty to children, who had it committed to the asylum, although such was the case.

All this and much more too is set forth in the additional affidavits, which have been prepared through the efforts of The Evening World and which will show conclusively that the only just and humane thing the committee can do is to order the return of the boy to this city and his restoration to his friends.

From information already in the possession of The Evening World it is safe to say that the public need not remain much longer in ignorance of the real cause.

When the cases were called Col. Fellows came in and took his seat beside the Recorder. To an Evening World reporter he said he would push the cases to an early trial, and the Recorder had in ormed him that he would give his attention to the fixing of a date for the trials as soon as he could dispose of the prison cases now before him.

Slebert will appear to-morrow to plead, and his case will take the same course as the others. All the accused persons are under bonds to appear for trial when wanted.
